For Infant classes ie. Reception, Year 1 and Year 2, the number of pupils is limited by law to a maximum of 30. Admission applications can be refused if a school's infant classes have reached their legal limit.

Parents have the statutory right of appeal; however, the Independent Appeal Panel have limited powers and can only uphold an appeal if:

- (1) The admission of an additional child would not breach the Infant Class Size limit of 30, OR
- (2) The admission arrangements did not comply with admissions law, or were not correctly and impartially applied and your child would have been offered a place if the arrangements had been complied with or had been correctly and impartially applied, OR
- (3) The decision to refuse admission was not one which a reasonable admission authority would have made in the circumstances of the case.

Given the limited nature of the possible grounds on which an appeal may be upheld, infant class size appeals are rarely successful.

Although a parent may, for example, claim that they cannot get two or more children to different schools; that the school offered is too far away; the school offered will cause problems with childcare or work commitments; none of these are reasons for an Appeal Panel to legally uphold an Infant Class Size appeal.
